Ain't Life Wonderful

Rennie Witcher

It's President's Day Honoring the birthdays of President's George Washington (our first) and President Abraham Lincoln (our most revered). The third Monday in February is annually observed as a catch-all day.

What? It's not true? OK, ok, we understand that it is not really "President's Day" according to federal law. It is actually a George Washington's Birthday holiday today. Yes, we know that it is not really George Washington's birthday today. That's on Friday of this week, the 22nd. But the Congress of the United States declared a special holiday celebrating Washington's birthday on the third Monday in February so everybody could have a long weekend. Of course if it was on Friday of this week, it would actually be his birthday, and everybody could still have a long weekend...?

You see, when I was a kid, way back when, we celebrated Lincoln's birthday on the 12th and Washington's birthday on the 22nd of Feb., their real birthdays. We talked about Lincoln's studying by candlelight in the log cabin after he split logs all day, and the noble way he led the country through the Civil War, and about the Gettysburg address and Emancipation. A few days later on the 22nd we'd talk about Washington's cherry pie and "I cannot tell a lie" and looked at the "crossing the Delaware" picture.

But, somebody in Washington must have decided that was too much to bear, having to celebrate two birthdays that often came in the middle of the week. So, in 1971 they figured out the three day weekend thing and chose a date, in the middle between presidential birthdays. But, it seems they named it the Washington's Birthday holiday. Somebody thought better of it and introduced a bill that would have named it "President's Day" to celebrate both Lincoln and Washington's birthdays and everybody talked about it, and thought that's what they did...but as often happens, that bill got lost in a committee or sub-committee or something.

Now, even though today is really Washington's Birthday-day, most of us call it President's Day, so we can honor ol' Abe too. Sometimes, it seems like it's easier to just go your own way and ignore some of what comes out of Washington. It just goes to show what a mess our governments can make of things sometimes, even with perfectly good intentions.

Here's hopin' you enjoy the holiday, and spend lots of time thinkin' about both hard working ol' Abe and honest George, and please don't tell any lies.

We're rootin' for ya. RW

The Week

Lampasas FFA member Bryli Wilson started FFA Week Saturday on a high note, participating in the San Angelo Livestock Show's annual Premium Sale.

She exhibited her market hog Thursday, placing 3rd of 68 Market hogs and qualifying for the Annual Premium Auction.
