

The Weather

The High yesterday 70°

The Low this morning 56°

It was very foggy in Lampasas Co. overnight and at daybreak.

Today: The dense fog is expected to clear by late morning, then it will be partly sunny and up to perhaps 78° this afternoon. Light and variable wind will become SW at 5-10 mph.

Tonight: A 20% chance of showers after midnight, otherwise cloudy and down to about 40° with north wind 5-10 mph.

Thursday: Mostly cloudy and a 20% chance of rain. The high should be about 55° with that north wind 5-10. Overnight there could be drizzle after midnight and down to 43°. The north wind will shift to E-NE and turn calm.

Rest of the week: Friday could bring drizzle before noon, partly sunny then with a high near 75° and light wind becoming south at 5-10 in the morning.

Saturday looks like a 30% rain chance now, otherwise 50s in the morning and getting up to 63° in the afternoon. Overnight the rain chance gets up to 50% and the low drops into the upper 30s behind a 10 mph north wind.

Sunday rain chances are to 30% and the high hangs at about 47. The big note is that Sunday night is expected to bring a light freeze, dropping to what is believed to be about 29°. That kind of cold weather is expected to be around into Monday and Tuesday.

Lampasas Fire Chief Retires

Reece Oesterich, Current Fire Chief, former Fire Marshal, and 22 yr veteran of Lampasas FD is leaving. He is taking retirement, for which he is eligible now, but is reportedly taking another job as a State fire investigator.

A reception is planned for Chief Oestreich tomorrow at the Lampasas Fire Station. The public is invited to come by and wish him well at 2pm.

As to his replacement, according to City Manager Finley deGraffenried, the City will make the vacancy public and begin taking official applications for the job as Lampasas Fire Chief in the near future.
