National Agriculture Day

For lots of reasons, all of us do, or certainly should, respect agriculture and all the people involved with the management of our farms, ranches, forests and parklands.

The flora and fauna of our world not only feed us, they are the most critical, absolutely necessary, part of our environment. Working with them, management of them, is what agriculture is all about.

So, those of us who spend our days in offices or driving up and down highways or in service-type jobs must be thankful that there are people out there managing farms and ranches and public lands and livestock auctions and ag programs in schools.

We salute and appreciate all of them. Thank you!
