(cont'd from front) it will be impossible to know where or when the testing will occur in any specific area.

Opening hydrants can sometimes cause a temporary discoloration of water in nearby homes. If you notice discoloration in your water, it is not a cause for concern. The discoloration is not harmful in any way and residents are encouraged to run water until it is clear before washing clothes or drinking it. In most instances, the water will clear in approximately five minutes. If the discoloration persists, residents should wait an hour and try again.

This kind of testing not only ensures the protection of Copperas Cove's residents; it also is an evaluation indicator used by the Insurance Services Office (ISO), which rates cities according to the fire protection they offer. This annual testing is essential to maintain the Fire Department Class 2 fire rating and ensure that hydrants operate efficiently for fire protection.

In addition to being a requirement of ISO, hydrant testing provides many benefits for residents and fire personnel. The testing identifies potential weak areas in the system, stirs up materials that settle in the hydrant, and cleans out the lines.

Fire personnel gain firsthand knowledge of where hydrants are located, assure they are visible from the road, operational as a "first water" source, and can confirm they are maintained on a regular basis.

If you observe a hydrant that is out of service or experiencing problems, contact the City of Copperas Cove Water Department at 254-547-2416.
