Texas Wildfire Update

As of yesterday at noon, Texas A&M Forest Service fire resources responded to 4 new wildfires that burned 4,445 acres across the state Wednesday. Crews continued suppression operations on 5 carryover wildfires, and were currently working on 9 wildfire across the state.

There is potential for large wildfires to occur in the Western/Eastern Hill Country and Rolling Plain through Friday for areas near Childress, Vernon, Abilene, Brownwood, Lampasas, San Angelo, Ozona and Fredericksburg.

Any new fires in grass and brush vegetation will likely be resistant to control, as underlying drought and critically to extremely dry vegetation combine with 100-degree temperatures and periods of elevated to critical fire weather.

Very hot temperatures and mostly dry conditions during the week will decrease the moisture in vegetation through Friday for much of the state. A general trend of increasing initial attack fire activity is likely for Central, East and South Texas.

By the weekend, a pattern change is expected when a forecast cold front moves through the state. As a result, a seasonable cool and moist environment will limit potential for wildfire activity on Saturday and Sunday.

Active Wildfires:

Mesquite Heat Fire, Taylor County - est. 9,613 acres, 25% contained

Coconut Fire, Wilbarger County - est. 25,000 acres, 20% contained

LCRA Business Plan

The LCRA Board of Directors on Wednesday approved a business plan of about $438 million and authorized capital investments of about $669 million for energy, water and public service projects to support Texas in fiscal year 2023.

The Lower Colorado River Authority is the primary wholesale provider of electricity in Central Texas and manages the lower Colorado River and six Highland Lakes. LCRA Transmission Services Corporation is one of the largest electric transmission service providers in Texas.

“Our fiscal year 2023 plans continue our strong commitment to the people of Texas,” said Timothy Timmerman, chair of the LCRA Board of Directors. “The projects are investments in our state, for its people and economy – adding transmission lines, increasing our water supply, and continuing the safe and effective operation of our dams.”

As one of the largest public power providers in the state, LCRA is helping to meet the increasing need for power in Texas. LCRA provides power for cooperatives and small towns in Central Texas by selling wholesale electricity through long-term contracts with retail utilities.

“Power and water are critical for our growing state, and LCRA is delivering essential services for the people who depend on us,” said LCRA General Manager Phil Wilson. “We are investing in our power and water infrastructure so we can keep providing essential services for Texans for years to come.”

LCRA TSC plans to invest about $2.2 billion in the next five years to build new transmission facilities and improve existing ones. LCRA TSC will undertake numerous projects to increase reliability, meet existing and projected needs for electricity, and connect new electric generators to the grid.

LCRA also continues to make investments to increase regional water supplies and will continue to maintain and invest in its system of dams, which are critical to protect water supplies and continue flood management. Over the next five years, LCRA's water business plans to invest about $65 million in development of new water supply projects and about $32 million in dam rehabilitation projects to help ensure the dams continue to operate safely and effectively, meeting all state regulations for dam safety.

LCRA does not receive state appropriations or have the ability to levy taxes. LCRA is funded by the revenues its businesses generate.
