More Baby Formula Arrives

Many parents can take a deep sigh in relief because over 150,000 pounds of baby formula arrived by cargo plane Sunday morning at Bush Intercontinental Airport in Houston yesterday.

The shipment arrived just before 7am supplying enough formula to fill 1.5 million bottles.

The increase in baby formula supply is part of "Operation Fly Formula, an initiative by President Joe Biden that began in May to combat formula shortages. The White House has been working to make formula more available as it has faced pressure from parents over supply and demand issues.

The Michigan plant run by Abbott is the largest domestic manufacturer of baby formula but shut down in February due to safety concerns.

The plant reopened on June 4 after the company committed to additional sanitizing and safety protocols, but closed again shortly after severe weather caused damage to the plant.
