DPS Increases Patrols for Holiday Weekend

According to a story on kxxv.com, it's an exciting time of year anytime our nation's birthday rolls around, but it can also be a dangerous time of year too.

"They're expecting over 3-million Texans to hit the roadways this week," said TDPS State Trooper Sgt. Bryan Washko.

Texas has the second highest number of traffic related deaths in the country during the Fourth of July weekend over the past 14 years, according to a recent study by insurance savings app, Jerry. The holiday weekend has local law-enforcement beefing up their presence.

"They're focusing on speed violation, seatbelt violation of course DWIs. Also, the move over slow down law, as well as looking for drunk drivers" said Sgt. Washko.

"When they do that, they just do not endanger themselves. They endanger my family, your family or everybody that's around them if they were the crash. We see that all too often around the holiday weekend," said Sgt. Washko.

The roadway is not the only danger to look out for. Blazing heat can also cause problems. That is why it is always good to drink plenty of water and plan. You should also check your vehicle before you hit the road and follow the rules.

From Texas A & M Forestry Service

Texas A&M Forest Service encourages safety during the Fourth of July holiday

As Texans make plans to celebrate the Fourth of July, Texas A&M Forest Service encourages everyone to be careful with any outdoor activity that may cause a spark.

Excessive heat over the past two weeks has resulted in grasses drying across portions of North, Central and Southern regions of Texas. Areas with dry grass may support wildfire activity due to accidental ignitions from fireworks or other activities that cause a spark.

Conditions will improve Sunday through early next week, with temperatures falling below 100°F and increased chances for rainfall. Lower temperatures and opportunities for rain will keep the potential for wildfire ignitions low statewide through the July 4th holiday.

Though wildfire activity potential will be lower across the state next week, Texas A&M Forest Service and local fire officials are advising members of the public to be cautious with outdoor activities. Approximately 90 percent of wildfires are caused by humans and their activities, and Independence Day is one of the top days for reported wildfires.

To help prevent wildfires during hot and dry conditions: (1) Avoid parking and idling in tall, dry grass. Catalytic converters can get hot enough to ignite the grass under a vehicle. (2) Ensure chains and other metal parts aren't dragging from your vehicle — they throw sparks. (3) Avoid placing your grill near flammable vegetation or materials, never leave your grill unattended, and ensure coals are completely extinguished when you are done.

Note: Burn bans and fireworks restrictions are determined by county government. Texas A&M Forest Service does not determine, set or lift these restrictions.
