Spring Ho Weather

Wow, what was that??

High yesterday was 97° The low this morning was 69°

Lampasas' airport weather instruments are on the fritz this morning but last evening's wind gust registered 43 mph at 9:15pm as it came across the local airport.

.2 in. rain at Lometa's LCRA gauge on Wednesday .38 in. rain at Naruna's LCRA gauge on Wednesday .45 in. rain at Bend's LCRA gauge on Wednesday

Today: A 30% chance of rain is still in the forecast for this afternoon as the slow moving cold front comes through the area. Otherwise it will be mostly sunny with a high near 94°. That sounds odd, with a cold front affecting all the weather in the area, but it is the fact. The wind is N-NE at 5-10 mph and most of the cold front this morning was still north of here in the Ft. Worth/Dallas area, but headed this way. As it comes in, it continues to meet up with the edge of the southerly flow from the tropical depression off the coast. That can, as it did last evening, create weather surprises. Forecasters seem to believe it will be settling into normal, but somewhat cooler, weather for the rest of our Spring Ho week.

Tonight: Mostly clear, with a low around 72° and with north wind 5-10 mph.

Friday: Mostly sunny, with a high near 94° and N-NE wind 5-10 mph. Overnight Friday it should be clear and by Saturday morning the temp should be about 72°.

The Weekend: Saturday will be mostly sunny with a high near 93° and N-NE wind 5-10 mph.

The long term Saturday night forecast calls for clear, with a low around 74° and NE wind 5-10 mph.

Sunday should bring more of the same with a high around 94° and north wind 5-10 mph.

What was that?

Off and on, bad damage or not, scary or hardly noticeable depending on where you were, Lampasas was hit with the second really odd storm in three weeks.

The storms seemed to be what the weather folks call "outflows." They are clashes of different weather systems or different temperatures.

The first one took place on a Wednesday night, June 19th shortly after 9:30pm when Lampasas was hit by an outflow that came with at or near 50 mph winds for a few minutes. The second one took place last night (again on a Wednesday) at about 9:15pm when we were hit by a wind that was recorded as 43 mph at our airport but was certainly higher in some spots. It clocked 50 mph at another area airport and as it came down from the north, through the Ft. Worth area, at Keller, it was recorded at 66 mph. This one was an outflow from the odd summer cold front that came into Texas from the north and clashed in north Texas with weather systems that chain all the way back to the gulf.

At any rate, it created some havoc in Lampasas.

It was time for the Spring Ho HEB Fireworks Display last night. Everything was set up and ready to go as cell phones were showing an approaching storm on radar.

No one really expected the strong wind strength, though it was feared there would be rain. The decision to go ahead with it was made and just as the fireworks started, the storm hit the Brook Park area. The crowd scattered as tree limbs, some of them very large, were coming down in spots. At the same time, the fireworks overhead were blazing away as the pyrotechnics team had let it all go at once. (courtesy picture)

It was quite a show...for anyone who had time to look as they headed for cover. Firemen and Policemen in the park area were almost overwhelmed by the sudden rush of people trying to get out of the area in their vehicles but managed to do a great job of it.

The firemen did have to put out some embers from the fireworks and take calls at the same time. There was a grass fire east of Lampasas on CR 4315 that was actually put out by the rain before firemen arrived. There was an accident at CTE and 4th with one child passenger treated. A large tree limb went down on a house with minimal damage and a couple more incidents saw tree limbs go down on vehicles. There was a power outage in the NW part of town, caused by the storm but...all in all, it's OK.

It was a very memorable HEB Fireworks Display. We, all of us in the community, thank them for their annual sponsorship of the event.

The other Wednesday Spring Ho event....overshadowed in our news by the following stuff that we detailed above, was the annual Spring Ho Gospel Night.

The show, on stage, was great, with all hometown groups and talent from our local churches.

It featured more than 10 groups and was well-enjoyed by the usual large crowd, estimated by some to be several hundred.

The radio broadcast of the Gospel Night was poor, and Lampasas Radio apologizes for that.

The technical problems causing the poor audio were evidently caused by electrical disturbances in the air that in turn caused poor internet service, our usual way of transporting audio back to our main studio for broadcast.

No one could be more disappointed in our occasional failures than we are. We sincerely apologize.

Just One More Thing

(remember Lt. Colombo)

It's about that tropical storm thing...

The National Hurricane Center showed this map, featuring all the things they think could happen with one or both of the two storms brewing in the Gulf.

Out of some 16 or so possibilities above, one of them seems to show at least a fair chance a storm could hit land and head our way. Oh, mi-gosh, what's happenin' next??

What's For Today in

Spring Ho Thursday

Spring Ho events include the County Fair Exhibits downtown from 3-5:30pm, and KACQ 101.9 will be there. For the kids there will be "jump around water slides" in WM Brook Park from 6pm-dark, and "jump around dry inflatable's" in Hancock park from 6-11pm. We are presuming for the older kids there is the bungee trampoline, and for the truly adventurous, there will be helicopter rides at Grace Fellowship Church. .... And the Dance Contest at the VFW at 7:00 for the boot-scootin' crowd.
