(cont'd from front) Beto O'Rourke reported raising $27.6 million from late February through June, which is the most a candidate for state office in Texas has ever raised in a single reporting period. Because Texas has no campaign finance contribution limits, it's possible both candidates will accumulate and spend record-breaking amounts of campaign cash by November.

O'Rourke received 724,082 donations compared to Abbott's 202,352 donations. Abbott has roughly twice as much cash on hand than O'Rourke does.

Bolstered by his record-breaking figures over the past few months, O'Rourke has raised almost $4 million more than Abbott as of June 30, 2022. However, Abbott still maintains a financial advantage with twice as much cash on hand as O'Rourke. Back in June 2021, Abbott had a campaign balance of over $55 million. In addition, Abbott has spent over three times more money than his opponent, including a recent ad buy worth nearly $20 million.

Beto O'Rourke has raised 40.9 million, spent 15.9 million and has 23.9 million on hand. Greg Abbott has raised 37 million, spent 52.2 million and has 45.7 million on hand.

All told, the candidates together have raised a combined $78 million, spent $68 million and have a combined total of roughly $70 million in their campaign coffers.

O'Rourke received 332,586 in-state donations totaling $24.4 million compared to 92,859 in-state donations worth $30.9 million for Abbott.

However, both candidates have received a large number of donations from outside Texas. Each received 54% of their donations from donors outside of Texas. O'Rourke received about 391,000 donations from outside the state, while Abbott received roughly 109,000.

As of June 30, 2022, the overwhelming percentage of donations both candidates have received are those worth $200 or less. However, the total sums of those donations are about $19.5 million and $5.9 million for O'Rourke and Abbott, respectively. That makes up almost half of O'Rourke's total amount raised.
