Texas A & M Forestry Service

The lack of rainfall over the past few weeks combined with high temperatures this past week have slowly dried surface fuels. The presence of very dry air behind this weekend's cold front will result in a rapid rate of drying in dead surface fuels through Monday. Moderate initial attack potential is likely in the timber litter fuel of East, Central and North Texas on Sunday and Monday.

Hurricane Ian

Outer bands of heavy rain are lashing Grand Cayman, where winds have gusted up to 53 mph early Monday morning. As mentioned earlier, a hurricane watch has now been issued for parts of Florida's west coast from north of Englewood to the Anclote River, including Tampa Bay. This watch means hurricane conditions are possible and is typically issued 48 hours in advance of when tropical storm force winds may begin. A storm surge watch is also in effect from the Anclote River to the Florida Keys, meaning life-threatening flooding from rising water moving inland from the coastline is possible by Tuesday. A hurricane warning is in effect for Grand Cayman in the Cayman Islands, as well as for parts of western Cuba, as shown in the map below. This means hurricane conditions are expected, in this case Monday in Grand Cayman and by early Tuesday in western Cuba.

A tropical storm warning is in effect for other parts of western and central Cuba as well as the lower Florida Keys, meaning tropical storm conditions are expected there Monday night or Tuesday.

After its brush with Grand Cayman, Ian will head for western Cuba tonight into early Tuesday, then in the general direction either of the Florida Panhandle or Florida Peninsula.

There remains important uncertainty about Ian's track forecast with regard to Florida.

If Ian curls sharper toward the east, that could bring it ashore somewhere along the western Florida Peninsula as soon as late Wednesday.

If, however, it continues in a more northerly direction, its center may not come ashore in the Big Bend of Panhandle until late Thursday or Friday. Ian is currently centered southwest of Grand Cayman, moving northwest.

There is a real threat Ian's circulation could scrape up a significant portion of the western Peninsula, even if it never makes landfall, there.

Ian is expected to rapidly intensify to a major hurricane (at least Category 3) either by the time it reaches western Cuba or in the southeastern Gulf of Mexico Tuesday.

Sports

Badger Tennis

Tennis team traveled to Brownwood Thursday for an almost 5 hour long match. Some of the kids matches lasted 2 hours and then turned around and played for another 2 hours in singles.

This was a nail biter, fist pumper, heart beater, emotional up and down battle. We have won or lost by 2 matches or less over the last few years with Brownwood and this one did not disappoint. Remember we have to win 10 matches to get a team win.

With the score 9-9, Ashfield was the last one on and down a set with both teams watching. As the second set came to a climactic end with Ashfield pulling it out in a long point to win the second set in a tie breaker 7-4. NOW to the third set. First one to 10, win by two.

Ashfield had 3 match points and finally hit a shot deep enough that the opponent hit it up in the air and with the only thing you could hear was the hearts of every player beating loudly with nervousness, it fell into the net.

12-10...WE WIN 10-9

The players charged the courts with excitement. Replay of last weeks match against Leander, where White won in the tie breaker.

Huge comeback and great play for the last 4 players on court that felt the pressure of the match and team. Awesome team building experience and confidence boost for those players.

We play Glenrose there on Tuesday.

WE are 2-0 in district
7-2 over all.

Badger Football

Badger Football has a bye week this week before district play ramps up next week at the Badgers take on the Burnet Bulldogs in Burnet October 7th.
