Texas A & M Task Force Headed to Florida

Governor Greg Abbott yesterday directed the Texas Division of Emergency Management (TDEM) to deploy Texas A&M Task Force 1 to Florida ahead of Hurricane Ian to support a request by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

"The spirit of Texas is helping one another in times of need, and we are proud to help our fellow Americans in Florida ahead of the arrival of Hurricane Ian," said Governor Abbott. "Texas is no stranger to hurricane disaster response efforts, and we recognize the urgency for additional resources in preparation of this Category 3 storm. We greatly appreciate the the generosity of Floridians and aid the State of Florida has sent us during times of crisis in our state—and we are honored to do the same."

Texas A&M Task Force 1 has deployed a Type 3 urban search-and-rescue team consisting of 45 personnel, 4 boats, and 2 canines. Texas A&M Task Force 1 functions as one of the 28 federal teams under FEMA's National Urban Search and Rescue System and is one of two statewide search and rescue teams under the direction of the TDEM. Texas A&M Task Force 1 is sponsored by the Texas A&M Engineering Extension Service (TEEX), a member of The Texas A&M University System, and is headquartered in College Station, Texas.

Electric Vehicle Charging Stations

Texas can move forward with a plan to build a network of hundreds of electric vehicle charging locations across the state after the Federal Highway Administration approved the state's plan on Tuesday.

Texas will use up to $408 million from the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law signed into law last year to install fast-charging electric vehicle charging locations across the state. In the first year, Texas plans to build more than 50 new locations along major Texas interstates between El Paso, San Antonio, Austin, Dallas and Houston. A handful of stations are proposed in the Panhandle and the Rio Grande Valley.

In the next two to five years, the Texas Department of Transportation's plan proposes expanding the stations into rural areas and building at least one electric vehicle charger in every one of the state's 254 counties.

In August, President Joe Biden signed into law the Inflation Reduction Act, an even more ambitious climate package to curtail greenhouse gas emissions and reduce the U.S. economy's reliance on fossil fuels. The law will provide hundreds of billions of dollars in tax credits and subsidies (cont'd on back)

(cont'd from front) for clean energy programs and also includes consumer tax credits to buy electric vehicles.

In addition to the more than $400 million for electric vehicle chargers, Texas is expected to receive about $27 billion for roads and bridges, $3.4 billion for public transportation and $1.2 billion for airports from the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law.

The Federal Highway Administration approved money for every state, plus Washington, D.C., and Puerto Rico, to build electric vehicle charging stations, the agency said, with Texas getting the most of any state. California was second with an estimated $384 million for chargers.

TxDOT's plan aims to build 55 new charging locations during the first year. Private companies have already installed 27 charging locations along the targeted highways, and 26 more will be funded by a national Volkswagen emissions cheating lawsuit settlement. The state said that will satisfy the federal government's requirement to have charging stations every 50-70 miles along what are called alternative fuel corridors.

TxDOT plans to award contracts to build the stations in the spring.
