Gubernatorial Debate Tonight

(Texas Tribune) Immigration, abortion, the economy and guns are expected to be major topics of conversation Friday night as Republican Gov. Greg Abbott faces off against his Democratic challenger, Beto O'Rourke, in their only planned debate ahead of the Nov. 8 election.

Abbott, who is seeking a third term in office, is leading in the polls by single-digit margins and will look to push his priority issue of border security to the forefront of the debate, along with the country's struggling economy under the watch of Democratic President Joe Biden.

O'Rourke, who came within 3 percentage points of unseating Republican U.S. Sen. Ted Cruz in 2018, is expected to attack Abbott's resistance to gun restrictions after the Uvalde school shooting in May, his record on the state's electricity grid that led to widespread power outages during last year's deadly winter freeze and his support of the Legislature's move to ban nearly all abortions in the state.

"This is a race where a choice between the two candidates could not be more clear," said Rebecca Deen, a political science professor at the University of Texas at Arlington. "If you think about a Venn diagram, I'm not quite sure if there's any overlap. So you're just going to see the two folks appealing to the things that they know their voters want to hear."

For Abbott, that means he'll likely be talking about the $4 billion he's invested into Operation Lone Star, an attempt to slow the number of migrants crossing into the state by deploying thousands of National Guard service members and Department of Public Safety troopers to the border and providing additional funding to local officials in border counties seeing large number of migrants crossing through their jurisdictions.

"The governor wants to highlight his concerns about the security of the border," Deen said. "He wants to blame President Biden for what he calls a 'porous border,' an increase in illegal immigration, the recent sponsoring of buses [full of migrants] to cities in the north. The way that he talks about the sharing of the burden that Texas experiences with the cost of undocumented immigration, all those things are winners for the governor."

O'Rourke will need to walk a tightrope in acknowledging a problem at the border while at the same time outlining his vision for a better way to deal with the large number of migrants arriving in Texas every day. This month, federal authorities announced that the number of migrants encountered by officials at the U.S.-Mexico border surpassed 2 million during the 2022 fiscal year, the first time the country has crossed that threshold.

Texas Sends More Resources to Florida

Governor Greg Abbott yesterday announced that the State of Texas has deployed additional state resources to support Hurricane Ian response and recovery efforts in Florida.

"Texans understand the urgency of hurricane disaster response and recovery efforts, and our state is swiftly sending more support and resources to Florida as they continue responding to Hurricane Ian," said Governor Abbott. "America is stronger when we come together during times of crisis, and the State of Texas will continue helping Floridians as they prepare to move forward from this dangerous storm."

The Texas Division of Emergency Management (TDEM) has mobilized and deployed over 60 personnel to support Florida's response and recovery efforts, including:

Texas Division of Emergency Management:

One Emergency Management Assistance Compact (EMAC) Advance Team, consisting of two personnel, to support EMAC coordination in the Florida State Emergency Operations Center. The Texas Disaster Recovery Task Force, consisting of five personnel, to support volunteer and donations management operations.

The Burn Ban is in Effect!

(cont'd from front) Texas A&M Forest Service:

One All-Hazards Incident Management Team, consisting of 12 personnel and one mobile command post, to support field operations in impacted areas.

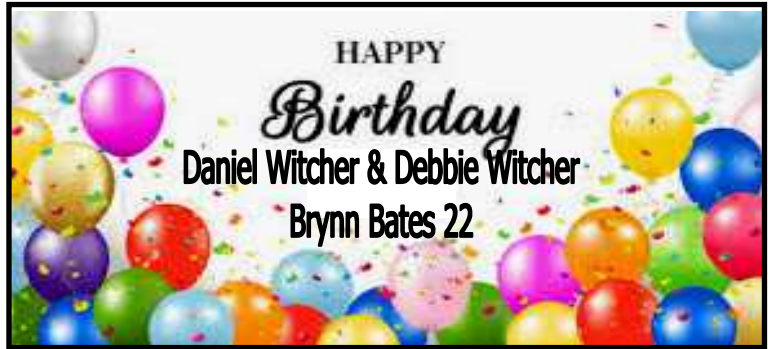

These resources were deployed by TDEM at Governor Abbott's direction following a request by the State of Florida through EMAC.

Additionally, more than 1,000 personnel from Texas electricity providers deployed to Florida this week to support power restoration.

Additional resources may be deployed as requested by Florida officials. EMAC is a state-to-state mutual aid system where the requesting state is responsible for the reimbursement of mission costs. For more information, visit emacweb.org.

Uvalde Parents File Lawsuit

(Texas Tribune) The families of three children who survived the Uvalde mass shooting in May have filed the first lawsuit in a federal court against the Uvalde school district, law enforcement officials, gun makers and others, alleging that their negligence and failures contributed to the massacre.

The suit was filed Wednesday in Texas' Western District Court and is seeking unspecified damages. One of the children in the lawsuit was wounded in the shooting and was best friends with one of the students killed, according to the lawyers.

"We are after accountability and damages, and because my plaintiffs are young, they will have to deal with the trauma of what they went through," said Stephanie Sherman, the families' lawyer. "It's just a perfect soup of lack of care, and I can't help but think this poor community was not protected in any way."

In all, the suit names 10 defendants: the Uvalde Consolidated Independent School District; since-fired school district police chief Pete Arredondo; the City of Uvalde; Mariano Pargas, a lieutenant who was the acting Uvalde police chief during the shooting; Mandy Gutierrez, the school's principal who the suit alleges failed to notify teachers of the gunman's presence through the school's intercom; Daniel Defense LLC, a gun manufacturer; Firequest International Inc., which designed an accessory trigger system the gunman used; Oasis Outback LLC, the gun store in Uvalde where the shooter bought and picked up his firearms; Motorola Solutions Inc., which designed or sold radio communication devices used by first responders that allegedly failed; and Schneider Electric USA Inc., which is alleged to have made or installed the doors at the school.

The defendants could not be immediately reached for comment.

About a month ago, another law firm served the Uvalde school district with a $27 billion claim over the May 24 shooting at Robb Elementary School that left 19 children and two teachers dead.

The lawsuit says each defendant played a part in the shooting's tragic outcome, from producing faulty technology that hindered first responders to pushing dark marketing that pitches lethal weapons to young minds.
