Texas Workforce Commission and Child Care

AUSTIN – Last week, the Texas Workforce Commission (TWC) approved $627.5 million in funding to support the addition and expansion of child care providers statewide, as well as assist TWC's Child Care Services (CCS) providers as they transition to the new requirement to participate in TWC's quality-rating improvement system, Texas Rising Star. The new funding supports four major efforts: increasing the child care expansion grants; allocating additional stimulus funding to aid CCS providers; aligning child care payments for families receiving assistance to reflect private pay methods; and enhancing online platforms for career development for early childhood educators.

In May, the Commission approved $75 million to increase the availability of child care for working parents. The response since was so great, the Commission has now approved an additional $75 million in start-up grants. TWC is offering start-up funding to support three goals — the expansion of child care in areas of the state that lack sufficient child care capacity, the additional supply of child care for infants, and child care created in partnership with employers.

"TWC has set a goal to serve nearly 140,000 kids a day with 12-month scholarships so their parents can work or receive education and training," said TWC Commissioner Representing Labor Julian Alvarez. "We want to ensure those kids — and all Texas children — get access to the best early learning opportunities."
