Ending the Streak of Fatality Accidents

This Nov. 7, Texas marks 22 years of daily deaths on our roadways with more than 79,000 innocent lives lost to preventable fatal crashes. For the past several years, about 10 people have died every day in crashes across the state.

For the first time in the agency's history of analyzing fatal crashes, experts spoke with a psychology professor to dig deeper into the driver behavior. In an interview, Dr. Art Markman from the University of Texas, alluded to an erosion of community that can be a cause for an increase in traffic fatalities.

"With the knowledge that, since the pandemic, people don't seem to view others around them as part of a community, and, that they care less about those around them, we are starting to identify the problem," said Ryan. "If we know there is a problem and we can identify that a big part of the problem is a lack of caring or apathy, then we also know the solution - we must care more about those around us."

Drivers have the power to protect themselves, their passengers and fellow community members because most crashes and fatalities are preventable and caused by things such as speeding, drunk driving and distracted driving. That's why the approach to reaching zero deaths must be through what TxDOT calls the 3 E's: engineering, education and enforcement. We all have a responsibility to keep our roads and fellow drivers safe.

TxDOT is asking all Texans to do any or all the following to raise awareness:

* Make the best and safest decisions behind the wheel, don't drive under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs; always obey traffic laws; always wear your seatbelt.

* Post pictures on social media displaying the hashtag #EndTheStreakTX.

* Share personal stories on social media of loved ones who have been lost in a crash and use the hashtag #EndTheStreakTX.

* Follow @txdot social media pages and share the content we post.
